1. [ ] Comment. This department has not been identified in previous reports, although the existence of such a militia-supervisory office at military district level is not improbable. The hsien arms department (hsien wu chuang pu, 4905/2976/5944/6752) is the highest-level body directly concerned with militia affairs that has been specifically identified in previous reports; [ ] this department and reported that the militia chain-of-command passed upwards through unspecified departments of the military sub-district, military district, and military area to the Revolutionary Military Council.

2. [ ] Comment. HUANG was formerly commander of the 43 Army; his present position is unknown.

25X1

3. [ ] Comment. There appears to be some discrepancy between paragraph 4a, which stated that the power of village militia cadres was to be increased, and paragraph 4f, which states that all militia cadres were to be replaced by Chinese Communist Party Commissioners. [ ]

[ ] means that the power of the village militia cadres is to be increased over that of other local officials, and that the local militia officials are to be replaced by trusted party members.
